Dear employee,

All too often we hear about excuses for not wearing your personal protective equipment: too warm, too cold, it itches or hinders you, makes you look like a fool, etc.

Not using your personal protective equipment is a choice you are free to make , but are you considering the consequences of your choice too?

Let's take foot protection as an example. In a warehouse, where rolling stock is driving to and fro, it's best not to think of what would happen if a fork lift ran over your feet. When towing heavy materials, there is always something that can drop on your feet. Or what if you got your foot trapped in a machine on the shop floor. You won't be looking so smart in your fashionable trainers!

The consequences can be far-reaching if you are not wearing safety shoes: from a bruised toe, to paralysis or even amputation, the consequences are nearly always irreversible!

In fact, choosing not to put on your protective equipment is choosing to put up with the consequences.

If you consider things from this point of view, we guess you won't need long to make the right choice.

But the choice is yours.

Kind regards,

The board
