

Never having to walk anywhere again?

Dear employee,

All too often we hear about excuses for not wearing your personal protective equipment: too warm, too cold, it itches or hinders you, makes you look like a fool, etc.

Take fall protection equipment for example. It happens only too often that someone climbs onto scaffolding without wearing fall protection equipment, because they only need to be on the second floor, or they're just passing up some tools. Wearing a full body harness, let alone securing oneself, just seems too much trouble.

However, there is always the risk of falling, even the most experienced climber can fall. So it is not just a choice between whether or not to wear a full body harness, but rather a choice between falling for your full body harness or accepting the consequences of a fall.

If you look at it this way, you probably won't need to think very long.

But the choice ... is up to you!

Kind regards,

The board

Or rather wear your fall arrest harness?
